PRO-KMT PRESS CHARGES CHINESE COMMUNISTS
CONTINUE TO STRENGTHEN MILITARY THROUGH SOVIET AID

[Numbers in parentheses refer to appended sources.]

Pro-KMT Hong Kong and Hanoi Chinese-language newspapers published several articles between 21 June and 11 July 1951 revealing that the Chinese Communists are continuing to receive substantial Soviet military assistance as follows:

It is reported that recent meetings between Chinese Communist leaders and Stalin were held for the purposes of discussing possible Sino-Soviet actions against Western nations. KMT observers interpret a series of actions taken by the Chinese Communists, such as concentrating of forces in the Northeast, entry into the Korean conflict, and the large-scale construction of railways, highways, and airfields throughout China, as preparations for a third world war. Recent reports state that 3,000 able-bodied men are being drafted from each hsien in Shantung, or a total of 324,000 men from Shantung alone.(1)

The Chinese Communists and the Soviets are said to have concluded a secret agreement under which the Soviet Union has been granted the right to establish both air and military bases at Chia-mu-ssu, Harbin, Mukden, Peiping, Lan-chou, Nanking, Tsingtao, Hankow, Kuei-lin and Nan-ning. Since June 1951, two Siberian aircraft plants have delivered 60 Mig-15 fighter planes and 28 Tu-4 bombers to Mukden in fulfillment of this agreement.(2)

The expansion of the Nan-ning, Kwangsi, airfield to facilitate the landing of bombers was reported by Chung-lien She. The runway of this airfield, formerly 500 meters long, is now 800 meters long and 50 meters wide. It is further reported that under Soviet supervision, an airfield is being built in Ch'in Hsien, Kwantung.(3)

Some 200 Soviet, German, and Japanese military, political, and technical personnel are reported to have landed at Yu-lin, San-ya, and Hai-k'ou harbors, Hainan, since mid-May 1951 to assist the Chinese Communists to train personnel for sea, land, and air forces, to work in mines, and to establish defense facilities in these localities.(4)

Some 40 Soviet advisers, led by Colonel Wu-ssu-no-fu (Chinese approximation of Soviet name/ (烏思諾夫) are training 500,000 Chinese Communist soldiers in Nan-ning, according to a Taihoku source as reported by a Hanoi Chinese-language newspaper.(3)

On 21 June 1951, the Soviet government announced that an agreement had been reached between the Chinese Communists and the USSR to increase the exchange of material over the amount agreed upon in the 1950 30-year friendship pact for the purpose of counteracting the Western economic blockade.(5)
